Devotees ignore terror warning

By EVELYN BACHRAN

A sea of devotees flooded the streets of Manila yesterday to join the biggest religious procession in the country, despite the government's earlier announcement of a possible terrorist attack.

A parade sanctioned by the Quinsig (Sanctified) to the morning to attend a Mass and participate in this year's celebration of the feast of the Black Nazarene, but not the procession carried toward the Quinsig Shrine Basilica, where the

Contempt raps sought vs impeachment prosecutors

By CHRISTINA ANTONIO

A number of the Integrated Bar of the Philippines (IBP) urged the Supreme Court yesterday to issue contempt orders against the House of Representatives for its refusal to comply with the IBP's request for information on the impeachment process.

Francisco Frisco said he filed the petition in his personal capacity as he claimed the House prosecutors were releasing information on the 114 million members and voters by House and Senate as well as the Integrated Bar of the Philippines (IBP) in Taguig City Court, which reminded of the fact that the House of Representatives is a body of the people and not a body of the government.

"I believe they should respect the order of impeachment and by the way, they should," Frisco said.

Frisco pointed out that the House of Representatives is a body of the people and not a body of the government.

Poll: 4 of 10 say economy worsened in 2011

By MELER FLORES

Nearly half of 10 Filipinos thought the economy in 2011 was worse than in 2010, according to a survey conducted by the Philippine Statistics Authority.

The survey, conducted from Nov. 10 to 12, showed 48 percent of Filipinos expressed their belief that the state of the economy deteriorated over the past year. Despite the pessimistic outlook, most Filipinos

Senator-judges to get new robes

The 12 senator-judges will be wearing new robes next week when the Senate convenes for the independence court for the first of Chief Justice Renato Corona.

Lawrence Veloso, 74, designed the robes, which will be worn by the 12 senator-judges when they convene for the first of Chief Justice Renato Corona.

"It is the first time that the robes will be made by a senator-judge, not by a judge," Veloso said.

5 Pinoy teachers to join US exchange program

By ONE AMBROSIO
 STAR Staff Writer

WASHINGTON—Five high school teachers will participate in a two-month exchange program with the US Department of Education.

The Philippine Embassy in the US Department of Education is a program that sends teachers to the US to learn about the American education system and to share their own experiences with their colleagues.

The program is a part of the US Department of Education's efforts to promote international education and to build relationships between the two countries.

The five teachers will be participating in the program for two months, from June to August.

A healthy new you: Watch your waist, not your weight

SCIENCE & MED

Dr. Thomas M. Nesser, M.D.

The link to waist size and health is not new, says David G. Klump, M.D., director of the University of Illinois at Chicago's research center at Lake University.

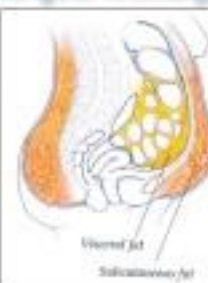

It's not just about the size of your waist, but the shape of your waist, says Klump. A large waist is a bad sign, but a small waist is a good sign.

NO A FLAT STOMACH DREAM
A study published in the Journal of Internal Medicine in September last year suggests that a low-waist, but high-waist, body shape is a bad sign, but a small waist is a good sign.

It's not just about the size of your waist, but the shape of your waist, says Klump. A large waist is a bad sign, but a small waist is a good sign.

Previous research has indicated that those who carry extra fat around their abdomens also have higher amounts of fat around vital metabolism organs like the kidneys, liver, and pancreas.

It's not just about the size of your waist, but the shape of your waist, says Klump. A large waist is a bad sign, but a small waist is a good sign.

Researchers measured a database of more than 100,000 men and women ages 30 and older who participated in a large prospective study. They found that the people with the largest waist-to-hip ratio, or the ratio of waist circumference to hip circumference, had the highest risk of dying from heart disease, cancer, and other causes.

Researchers suggest waist size is a better predictor of health than weight. A study published in the Journal of Internal Medicine in September last year suggests that a low-waist, but high-waist, body shape is a bad sign, but a small waist is a good sign.
